Hayworth picks up backing from leading House figure in 19th race

CROTON FALLS -- Rep. Tom Price, a leading figure in the House of Representatives among Republicans, has offered his full backing to Nan Hayworth in the race for New York's 19th District.

"You all are doing great work, and you're doing great work not just for Nan and not just for New York, but you're doing great work for the nation," Price told 85 Hayworth supporters during a fundraiser Friday evening. "Every place I go, I hear men and women saying, 'We don't recognize what is going on in Washington.' They're angry, they're concerned and, for the first time, they're fearful. Since when is government running the banks? Since when is government running the auto companies?"

Price's background as a physician and surgeon, like Hayworth's, gives him a special understanding of the new healthcare plan passed earlier this year. Price, who represents Newt Gingrich's former seat in the House, predicted the bill would be found unconstitutional, but said that regardless, it will not work effectively for patients.

"I believe this to be the most important election of our lives," Price said during the gathering at Primavera Restaurant. "Now is the time. Now is the time to latch onto high-quality candidates, and you've got one here in this district."

Hayworth, a lifelong Republican and fiscal conservative, was overwhelmingly endorsed by Republicans during their convention last month in her race against Hall. "We need to make government our servant again, and I will be your servant," she told the group.
